

LEARNING TO BE (TLLP)

WHAT:

Since life's conditions are always changing and require new knowledge and skills, we often find ourselves in the role of beginner throughout our lives. The "Learning to Be" curriculum applies FXUA values of character, community, development, stewardship, and peace.

The "Learning to Be" curriculum is comprised of 10 Transformative Learning and Leadership in Practice (TLLP) courses solely unique to FXUA and 10 General Education courses designed with high real-life application.

Course learning activities consist of reflective writing, self-assessments, observation and experiential exercises, team presentations, as well as game-based and collaborative activities. Since these courses are designed as participatory seminars, class time is filled with active and engaging discussions to inspire reflective thinking and applied practices.

WHY:

The purpose of the "Learning to Be" curriculum is to prepare our students and graduates for a lifetime of social performance and personal fulfillment. Our goal is to build the capacities of active, thriving, global citizens who make a social impact no matter where their career or life takes them.

WHO:

Sample courses included in the "Learning to Be" curriculum consist of:

1. HUMN 200: Designing Your Life
2. TLLP 250: Designing Your Career
3. TLLP 275: Practices of Social Impact
4. INCS 300: Principles of Global Citizenship
5. TLLP 425: Practices of Career Planning and Leadership

HOW:

The TLLP courses are centered in human development, including theories and applications of learning, well-being, career development, global citizenship, thinking, and leadership. After completing these courses, students will be able to:

1. Apply FXUA's values of character, community, development, stewardship, and peace in all aspects of daily life.
2. Critically analyze one's identity and worldview through self-observation and assessment.
3. Demonstrate practices of lifelong learning and conscious being in real-life applications.
4. Define worldviews and values, as well as demonstrate practices, aligned with being a global citizen.
5. Develop one's capabilities for self-fulfillment and social performance throughout career and life.

Visit us at

for more information